Re: Your website Notice

Greetings,

I am in receipt of your Cease and Desist Order that names me personally as well as the LPIA from teaching Continuing Education, but am entirely confused as to why my company name has been placed on the Mast Head of your website, www.lsbpie.com to announce to the world that Creative Cyber Innovations has been suspended.

Please note that Creative Cyber Innovations has never been noticed as to any complaint and in my sincere belief is in full compliance with the rules and regulations of the LSBPIE. You have failed to bring others into compliance and at the same time suspended my company that is in compliance.

I also bring to your attention that no other provider has been placed on the front page of your website as being suspended and this is just one additional item that proves that I am being treated differently from other providers. You tread in dangerous waters to accuse someone and damage them when they have done nothing wrong.

Never the less, I have honored your order and immediately suspended my entire website at www.ccisouth.org until such time as I am able to make code modifications to suspend the Louisiana Courses. I will not offer courses in violation of any rule. Never have and I don't intend to knowingly violate any rule.

The Board office has failed to distinguish between the LPIA and Steve Divine and now has lumped my courses offered through Creative Cyber Innovations, which has a different address and tax id number by the way into this, when you have failed to provide me with any notice what so ever.

I look forward to having the opportunity to address these issues at the next board meeting. In the mean time, please remove this notice from the website at www.lsbpie.com as the damages to my company and to me personally increase with each day that it remains.

Sincerely,

Steven D. Divine
